Everything is soaked in her presence. A smell, a sound, a place, even silence.. it all becomes a reminder. The world didn't just lose a person.. it lost an anchor of who I am. She's the witness to my whole existence, the one who saw me before I even knew yourself.

They both smile Rosie used to take me downtown to Woolworths when it used to be there. Take me to lunch walk around shop chitchat goof around road on a city bus. It was my first time I was younger then her kind of funny I was excited to ring the bell goofy right lol it was a fun day she used to babysit us kids she always played puzzles. She wanted me to play with her for some reason, I just wasn't in the puzzles at that time she used to babysit us. She was a fun babysitter, caring kind. She always try to make us kids, laugh and smile and then when I got older, I watching her kids a lot growing up and then when she got her own place, it wasn't that far from the house. I'd walk over there and babysit sometimes walk up to the little store on Lori get something she might need she was one of the most important person in my life, she showed me how to have fun when I was down and needed somebody to talk she was there for me. She always cheered me up. I felt better. I'm going to miss her dearly today tomorrow yesterday and all the days of my life I had with Rosie/Mom. I'm gonna miss her terribly. I'm going to try and remember all the good fun times, and I remember she's not suffering no pain. She's in heaven when she was really sick towards end of our life she would look up the guy she was say she saw her mom and the family waiting for her. She was ready. She wanted to be in heaven so I know she's at peace comfort with everyone. She loves and miss herself.
