“ Today started with the tornado sirens screaming at 6:11 this morning. Later Micky sends me a message that my church lady friend Anna passed away. But I already knew before I looked at the text. So I'm going to say that sirens going off was Anna's send off. She was a sweet old German woman. At least I thought so. It was my pleasure to drive her and her husband to church. We would stop at cub or aldi on the way home sometimes. She needed ice cream. After work today I goto cub for burger buns and ice cream. Standing in line the guy ahead of me offers to let me ahead because I only have 3 things. I say I can wait and thanks. Another guy comes in line behind me we chat a bit. I figure out dummy me leaves my wallet at work no way to pay. Guy behind me tells cashier he will get the tab. He said he was feeling good because he went fishing on the river and another guy was smoking a cigar. He says to the guy hey that smells good. Guy gives him one. It's a 10.00$ cigar. So he covered my bill. I shook his hand and thanked him. Back to the shop to get wallet. In the meantime the burger Micky is cooking smells bad. Need more burger. Stop at another cub get burger. In front of me in line is a elderly lady and a younger dude. He goes ahead of the lady and started bagging her stuff. He finished and came back to line. I tell cashier to add his stuff to my bill. I said to him he did something nice for the lady so I'll do something nice for him. He shook my hand and thanked me. Thank you Anna for being my cub angel today.
