“ I remember decades ago staying with aunt Betty and my cousin Bob when they lived in a little house, on the edge of a clearing, in the Big Woods of southern Minnesota. You had to walk a little bridge that was over a rushing stream to get to it. Betty made a delicious breakfast of eggs and Morel mushrooms. We sat at a little table with the morning sun rays filtering in through the cotton curtains. It was a bit magical. I could talk just about anything with my beautiful aunt Betty.

I will truly miss you Betty!
