“ For nearly the entire extent of my memory, I have known Cliff Nimis, having maintained a strong friendship with his daughter Diana from grade school to today. Cliff always had the sunniest personality, and he never failed to supply us with his "dad jokes." Besides his joking nature, he stands out among the parents of childhood friends in always addressing me with kindness, respect, and genuine interest in how I was doing. I felt like an honored guest in the Nimis home, not as a "little kid who came to play." I've tried to carry forward this lesson from Cliff in hosting my own child's friends at our house. Although I live far away and rarely saw him in recent years, I will miss his sparkling eyes and easy smile. Thanks so much, Cliff, for being an inspiration and for raising one my favorite people in the world. Your life was well lived, and I'm sure heaven welcomed you with a joyous polka in your honor.
