“ In this time of grief I think what I will remember most was his ability to brush off a bad situation and keep on moving. Some of the things that he dealt with were more than a lesser man could have handled. but not Kello, He would get back up and act as though it had never happened. Always one to tell a joke to break the ice or just talk ya through something when the world seemed wrong. I choose to believe that he will live on in this world in the hearts of those whose lives he touched.

My thoughts and prayers to kello's family. I only knew him for 4 1/2 years but every time I saw him he knew how to make someone laugh. He was not only my co worker but my friend. One thing he always said while in my savage office...like george washington I am history.. which at the time made me laugh at the time, but now I can't stop crying and wish I could have changed something to keep him here. God needed him for another reason, that no one will be able to ever understand. Thnaks for allowing us to know such a great man. Rip my friend.
