“ Hey Dian. I heard a song today that made me think of you. Of course, I started crying as I often do when I miss you. You were one of my dearest friends. I know it's been over five years, but you are not forgotten. A couple years ago, on Christmas Eve, I saw someone walking along the street that looked just like you. She could have been your twin. It was such a nice Christmas present, to have you back even for a moment. I still miss you. Sleep well, dear friend.

“ To all who loved her.

Dian was one of those people that you would have loved to have cloned over and over. There are just not enough people like her in this world.

Dian was a great friend to me. Her heart and soul was so huge.

I will miss her greatly.

*Love forever,
Mary*

“ dian had been supportive of my work as a filmmaker over the years. Our shared passion in social justice and foreign films lent itself to many spirited and inspiring conversations on the arts, politics, race, culture and beliefs. I will miss her dearly.
