“ I am sure many of you have heard Liz regale the story of how she met my father RPaulofNJ. She came into our life at a low point when my father had just been diagnosed with esophageal cancer. You see, they had been penpals for a few years and she wanted to meet him. The meeting was all we had hoped for, and I know more than they had hoped for. She came back a month later and stayed with my dad until he passed four months later. She taught me to (Quilt) during this time we traveled the countryside and she became a member of the family. She was so active and caring that it has been difficult to watch her struggle over these last three years. I and my family are grateful for her friendship and to know now that she is at peace, hopefully sewing again and sitting with my folks listening to dad's jokes over and over. Rest in peace Liz. We love you!
