“ I was an xray student at St. Barnabas, '69-'71. Dr. Mork was always the kindest, most gentle and patient with the students. His sense of humor was the best, I still use a few of his quips to this day. My sympathy to all of the family. May your loving memories bring you peace.

“ To the Mork family: Sending my sincere condolences for the loss of your Mom earlier this year, and now your Dad just last week. They have both been in my prayers over these past months as I knew their time was limited.

While I have lived many places, one thing has been a constant for me since college, a visit to Minnesota during summers or holidays. During almost every visit, for the past 35 years, I have been graced by the warmth of not just Martha, but of Dr Mork, Jackie or some member of the Mork family. I first met Jackie in 1984 on a visit to the Woodale house with my brother Kevin. I will never forget being left in the kitchen with her and being drilled with questions through a kind, but firm inquisitiveness that made me a bit nervous. I later got a tour of the house and doll collection. I first remember meeting Dr Mork at Kev and Marth's wedding in '85. An authentic, kind gentleman and someone I looked up to.

From then on, for every year, they were part of my life in a small but significant way. During my visits I attended Harris/Mork baptisms, holiday parties, church services and summer get togethers where we would chat or say hello. On reflection, I remember them both as symbols of commitment, family and love. As a peripatetic youth, this seemed a little old fashioned, now that I am older it seems like simply everything. Incredible role models. Lives well lived. I feel lucky to have known them both. As well, lucky to share during my visits some of the camaraderie and joy for life expressed in their children, grand and great grandkid(s). (haven't met Nolan yet!).

You are a special family, blessed with special parents. Their love now shines down on you all from heaven, I am sure. Peace to you all during this time of mourning and transition. Brendan Harris (Annie, Caeli and Sebastian)
