“ I met Ian during the time that my family was at Providence Reformed Baptist Church. As an unmarried adult, he was trying to find ways to be helpful to the young people in the congregation. Beneath his meek exterior, was a man who knew how to masterfully handle the sword of the Lord. His love of books, apologetics, and most importantly the destination of souls compelled him to help with judging homeschool speech and debate tournaments. He was always so careful to be an encouragement to the students to seek first what scripture says on matters. I am grateful for the contribution he made to the lives of my children and those at the tournaments. May the work he did here on earth have an impact for eternity in the lives of others. Ian looked forward to the day his soul would pass from earth to enter into the presence of the Lord, knowing he would enter heaven not by his own merits, but only by trusting in the shed blood of Jesus Christ his savior.
