“ James William Morris. My dad loved to skydive. As a child my memories of going with him and seeing him take off in a plane then anxiously waiting to see in the sky the plane again it meant I would soon see a big orange and white parachute and the closer it came to drop zone meant soon I would see my dad. He always had the biggest smile after his jumps. It was more fun going with him and being a part of his skydiving experiences than anything. He also would always pack his own. Watching him spread out this huge round orange and white canopy and cords and packing was amazing. And he still had a big smile while packing. As a child 4,5 and 6 years old he made me laugh when he used a different tone saying “I’m a rigger and a skydiver.” It always made me happy to see my dad’s happiness skydiving. Miss you dad.
