His wit and humor brought many things to our table. He loved watching the History Channel and would share his information with everyone who came to visit. John excelled at wood and rock carving. A chisel in one hand, a polisher in the other, over the years created masterpieces. He enjoyed nature exemplified by his many imitations of the song birds. John's journey was accompanied by his family at his side. He was loved and will be missed by all of us. "Life is not about surviving the storm but knowing how to dance in the rain."
