“ Dear Joyce,

I ran across this obituary by accident while researching the Malmberg and Lehnhardt family history, as I am one of the few left who actually knows it and decided that I'd better leave a record before it's too late. My sincere condolences to the family. It was remarkable how much Dad and Dale had in common, a love of garage sales and flea markets, jobs in public transit, fishing, smoking, (inedible to my way of thinking) pickled meats, an apparently knack for telling jokes and stories, a love of dogs and cats, and even down to using the same names for past pets, even though Dad and Dale didn't meet until over 40 years after Dale's birth. Joyce, you were always a gracious hostess and a welcoming presence. Mom and I always appreciated that. Thank you. In return for that and that alone, if you would be interested, with the help of our mutual second cousins from Dad's side of the family in MI and MN, the Malmberg family tree, complete with ancestral photos from 19th century Europe, is now online at Ancestry.com, titled the Malmberg/Lehnhardt & Donat/Volcek Family Tree. Although the tree is not accessible to the general public, access will be granted to any legitimate relatives by blood or marriage by contacting me, the tree's author for to partake of the various media. It is the only legitimate tree of our family currently online with a wealth of ancestral photos and stories going all the way back to the mid 19th century which alone makes it a rare commodity.

*Peace,
Karl F Malmberg*

“ I feel fortunate to have gotten to meet John and his wonderful family and know he will be greatly missed, especially by a certain Pug named "Bear". Even when John was suffering with poor health, he was cordial and always ready to spin a fishing tale for me. I'll think of you often and smile knowing that your suffering has come to an end. Be Blessed.
