“ I knew Kevin when we attended the same Catholic grade school. I have several fond memories of Kevin, as he was very out-going. One evening, we had some kind of performance, and were all hanging out in our classroom waiting for our class to be called. “Private Eyes” by Hall and Oates, was playing on a boom-box someone had brought in. Kevin was over by the doorway. All of a sudden, he turned off the lights. When everyone looked over at him, he said loudly, “And then Kevin said, let there be light!” Then he flicked the lights on and said, “And there was!”

At that moment, someone’s hand grabbed Kevin, and he disappeared into the hallway. I don’t know for sure – but it was rumored to have been Mrs. Simon.

He was fun when I knew him. I wouldn’t see him again after 8th grade graduation, but to read comments from those who knew him as an adult, I daresay he probably hadn’t changed too much in that respect.

*My sincere condolences to the Doyle family.
