“ I knew Lynn as a childhood friend in Providence, RI until she moved away to Minnesota and then we used to write each other regular letters. I remember when she first moved out there she'd wrote of the tornado sirens and I thought of how frightening that must be but Lynn was often fearless.

We shared a love of The Barbapapas family (TV Series 1973–1977) and Lynn was quite the artist as she often drew their pictures on letters she mailed me. As the years went on, we drifted off and our letters to one another stopped. However, that did not mean that I didn't often think of Lynn and I believe the same of her.

Now it is with my most sincere sympathy, that I pray the love of God enfolds all of the Studeny family during your journey through grief.

“ I am so thankful for having been blessed with a friendship with Linnie. We met in Nord'east Minneapolis when we were neighbors. We would reach out to each other from time to time. Often our struggles were simular and we supported and understood things that others couldn't understand.
The void here on earth will remain.
That smile, that voice, that golden heart.

“ Lynn timer was one of my best and longest friends. She was an incredibly sweet and caring woman that always had time for her friends. She is my son's Godmother, and although that role doesn't always mean as much as it should, but it meant a lot to Lynn timer. She never once missed a birthday gift or Christmas gift for Cooper since his birth. She would check in on him out of the blue because she cared about him and her role in his life. I will miss her dearly and will forever be grateful that she was my friend and I was blessed with the opportunity to know her. My sincere condolences and prayers to her wonderful family that she loved so much and spoke of all the time. God bless you Lynn timer and rest in peace sweet soul.
