

Marvin L. Newman

October 14, 2012

Newman, Marvin Lawrence Larry, Larry, quite contrary, off to where did you go? A quick wit and sardonic sense of humor and nonsense lost his senses and passed on the 14th of October, 2012. The single son of Chicago, Evanston, and occasionally Minneapolis, a father and grandfather loved by hoards of ladies, especially his late wife Estelle, and his surviving wife Frances. He was lucky enough to see the Cubs win the pennant once, and be told off by Miles Davis. He will be missed by men met in the park or pubs, and women passed at parties. His essence will remain in the hearts and minds of his family, many friends, and beloved pets. Private services.
