“ Mom, I know you would be proud of all of us. Everyone has very difficult times to live through, and losing the chance to call you whenever I wanted was the biggest for me. All of your kids are great people. And you have grandchildren that are amazing. Unfortunately we do not see each other as much as we should/could. Life is very busy, but amazing. I love you and miss you. thank you!

“ Grandma, It's been a really long time, and in that time I've learned to feel a lot of different emotions about your passing. I've grown to realize that the time we spent together really doesn't equal to the person I've become, It was only the beginning for you and I when you were so sadly taken away from us. I Spent a lot of time a few years back wishing that you could be a part of so many of the memories that have passed since 2004. I'm not only once again a big brother, but I'm also an adult, more of one than I could have ever imagined being while sitting next to your hospital bed my freshman year of high school. Six Holiday Seasons have past, and with each one things seem to get a little more normal. It seemed that with each of these moments I got a little more angry about the fact that you were taken so early. Living these moments without my grandma there to congratulate me, or somehow stumble upon my choir concert in the middle of downtown minneapolis is painful. But It wasn't until this year that I realized something. I look around each christmas and wonder where you've went. I look around at each life-changing event concerned that you are missing. I realize that you never have left us. I hear your voice when I visit Kim at Film and Video, I see your kindness at Debbie and Steve's, I recognize that wholesome love each time I hug my baby sister. When we come together as a family; I realize that all the pieces of you are back together again. Bright, Beautiful, Resilient, Honest, Loving, Perfect Renee Found her way into each and everyone in this family. And for that reason, I can't seem to miss her at all, because she never really left this family. She continues to Grow, Love, and Care through each one of us. I am so thankful, you are all here. You've made my life so perfect, and i really do cherish every moment we spend together. Love, “ Mom, I can't believe it has been 6 years since you were taken from us. Of course I still think about you everyday and miss you but that will never change. A lot has happened since you left and I am thankful that for the most part, everything has been good. It is the small things that do happen in life that make it tough, but what makes it even tougher is not being able to talk to you everyday as I did before. Of course I have accepted that life does and must go on, as I have responsibilities that I must take care of, and what makes me strong is knowing you are watching over me and guiding me in the right direction. Life Is Good! I love you Kim “ MOM. It's Andi still thinking about you EVERY day! So I thought I would share w/you some of the recent events. Your granddaughter Emma Renee was born on Sept.28th 2010.It was not a easy labor to say the least.We almost came to join you.But all is ok now.She is 5 months old TODAY!She is a real active little girl.She has your eyes. I had to cut my hrs. at work due to alot of issues in our family,but Tom is picking up hrs.w/our Realtor and he makes good money there and is able to work around his back issues. Sean is still in Mpls.w/his partner. Kayla-Long story and don't want to bore ya w/it. I just wanted to drop you a line and let ya know we ALL miss you alot!!! I hope you are looking down and are proud of what i have become.

“ Mom, It's Andi-Just thinking about you alot lately and thought I'd drop you a line. So I only have 10 days left until my due date. Really wishing you were here to see this and help me through it. So the babies name is Emma Renee!! You will NEVER be forgotten by the Petersen's! It has been 5 yrs since we last got to see each other. Some days it seems like forever and others it is just like yesterday. I miss you soooo much. I just try to remember the good times and all of your wisdom. Yes it bites me in the butt everyday.. YES, You were usually right. (except when I was) HA! Well I think about you daily and will continue to. I will write you more after the baby is born. MISS YOU AND LOVE YOU!!! Andi “ Hey mom, really missin you. As always you are in my thoughts EVERYDAY! There is alot of things going on here and i'd really like to share them with you. But this really isn't the place for some of them to be told. One good thing is: Tom & I are expecting again!! WOW! Right? The whole family hasn't been the same since you passed away, but we all have our moments. Things get better then they slide down hill. We are all trying to cope w/ things and we all have a different way of doing that. I am so glad for all the things you have instilled in me, they help me get through each and every day. MISS YOU!!!!

“ Happy Birthday Grandma! As Sean said, I don't think there is a single day that goes by when we don't think of you. Andy and I got married in October, it was absolutely amazing, and even though I know for a fact you were watching over us...possibly even showing it by a single sprinkle of rain on my cheek during the ceremony, I wish you could have been there so I could have seen the expressions on your face. I know you surround me though. I was at work the other day, and out of the blue, I could smell you...the way your clothes used to smell from your laundry soap, and your distinctive perfume - it lingered for about 30 minutes...and there was NO one around me physically...It has happened before also, and the memories it brings back are wonderful. You wouldn't believe how grown up everyone is getting! Richard has officially passed me up... (not that it takes much) and Sean and Kayla are blooming into young adults as well. It is really neat to see everyone's different stages in their own lives. Andy and I are going to be purchasing a house soon and we are super excited! Knowing that we will never get to see your face again, or have you hold us while we are having a tough day is an extremely hard concept to grasp, especially because you meant so much to all of us, but at the same time, it makes it easier to make positive life choices moving forward knowing that you are watching over our every move and you were the one who taught us the values in the first place. Love you Grandma “ Grandma, grandma, grandma. got to wonder what things would be like if you were still with us. how different it would be. i may not write here everyday, but i write about you on my website, and i think about you every second. i started college in july, and things were hard. it was expected. things still are but thank god i have people nearby, people who love me enough to help me out when i need it. and i need it a little more than i would like to admit. you were always ready for whatever, whenever. if my parents needed help, if i had a question. if i needed to make tissue paper ghost sucker things for my whole class for halloween, you'd have the coffee filters to do it, even though you dont drink coffee. :) i look up to what you are. and hope someday, i am just as great of a grandpa as you were a grandma. (fingers crossed) as of right now. just a broke college student. who works at a clothing store part time, and writes for a considerably exciting blog.(thats like a internet newspaper) things are exciting though. i have never been making so much progress in my life. so im a few words closer, and a few steps farther, but i know you know i love you, and i hope that you are watching us all grow into what you'd hope us to be. :) love you lots, you're little grandson,

But, Mom, you have gone on to a better place, and I know that you are preparing for your holidays in your own special way. If I could mail you a Christmas card, I would, but you never left a forwarding address, so I must do what I have to, here, and wish you the Merriest of all Christmas's. You were taken away from so many people who really needed you.I've been through so many changes(some good some not so good) I really miss you and your advice YEAH go figure! It's true you don't know what you've got UNTIL it's gone.A few things to share with you:We are still in Rochester, I finally found my calling in life,I have a career I help young adults with disabilities.I currently work in a group home with 4 ladies.Tom is home FULL time not by choice,but we are doing well.Sean and Kayla start school in 5 days.Sean is a senior.Kayla is a junior.WOW,they grow up fast!!!! You would be proud of them.They miss you alot.They have learned alot in the last 3 years(some good some not)Biggest lesson:APPRECIATE WHAT YOU,VE GOT BECAUSE YOU DON'T KNOW WHEN IT WILL BE GONE.Thanks to grandma Lenora and Grandpa Bill for keeping this going.(sorry I don't call,it just hurts toooo bad,so I've just separated myself from alot.Work keeps me going.I DO miss everybody. “ My Grandma was one special lady! Eventhough it has been one year since I have seen her last, it seems like just yesterday we were school shopping and going to Old Country Buffet, and staying over night when she would make me pork chops, mashed potatoes, and green beans. She was the person who you could always go to and tell her your problems and never have to worry what she would say. She cared so much for all of the people in her life, and would do anything for any of us. This is very hard for me, I miss her more and more each day. Sometimes when I am by myself, I can still smell the sweetness of her perfume-I just wish I could hug her one more time. I wish I would have told her what an awesome grandma she really was, I wouldn't have traded her for anything. I wish Sean, Kayla, Richard, and my own kids some day would have gotten to hug her and spend time with her also. But after all of my wishes, I am so thankful that I got to spend 18 years of my life looking up to a role model that has impacted the rest of my years. Thank you Grandma - you are missed more each day. I love you.

“ Mom, There came the night that we were called to gather around your bed. "The family is all here with you now", the Dr. said. And in your eyes there gleamed again, the old time tender light, that told you had been waiting just to know we were allright. You smiled the old familiar smile & prayed to God to keep us safe from harm throughout the years, and then you went to sleep. I have been putting this off since Thursday, September 1st. It has been one year since you were taken from us. I think about you all the time and wish you were here to share what is going on in my life since you left. The kids are doing well and Lindsay will be graduating from college in October! You would of been soooo proud of her! “ dear family, i want to share this poem with everyone who looks at this website. i wrote it myself after my grandma passed away. before

before i learned to walk and talk, she was there to carry me, before i learned to read and write, she was there to tell me stories, before i stepped into high school, she was there to reassure me, the day before i became a young adult, i stepped in to comfort her, the day she lay there hopelessly, i filled her with dreams and memories, the day her face was filled with sadness, i made her last thought happy, the morning when she stopped breathing, i made her proud.

“ Kim,

I just want you to know how sorry I am about your mom. I love you like a sister, and I just want you to know I am always here for you. My sympathy to you and your family, and the kids. I love you Kimmy.
