“ Rob was my older brother. I have fond memories of growing up with him. Thinking way, way back to our early adulthood . . . I remember the many times he helped me move from apartment to apartment. He always did all the heavy lifting, without complaint. I could always count on Rob for assistance whenever I asked. He never said no . . . he always made himself available. He helped me with so many things over the years . . . like teaching me how to drive, picking me up when I needed a ride, and changing all my flat tires before showing me how to do it for myself. He was always kind to me . . . kind, patient, and helpful. RIP Rob--you were a good big brother!
