“ I used to have the best time with cousin's Ron and Nadean when we traveled together. There were so many funny moments where we nearly got into a jam and there were so many perfect moments that seemed to come together like clockwork. One fun moment took place onboard his little boat. We were slowly drifting after Ron cut the motors and we proceeded to enjoy some cocktails (strawberry freezes -- I think she called them) . We laughed and told stories while we watched the sun going down and all the sudden Ron looked out at the water and discovered we'd come too close to one of the nesting Loon's. He stood up to get to the key to turn the motor on and nearly fell overboard. We giggled about it after he managed to get things worked out because we didn't want to upset the Loon's. Also, he said the water was too shallow there and he didn't want to get us stranded.
