“ I only knew Sharon for a short time but she was such an incredibly welcoming and kind person. She really made me feel so welcomed and was so easy to talk to. I wish I had the chance to have known her longer. She really seemed like such an amazing person. Rest in peace, Sharon.

“ I could always hear Sharon cheering for our band over anyone else at the venue. She always had a smile on her face and a heart of gold. Miss and love you always!

Brandon.

“ This is not how it is supposed to be. I am not supposed to be writing a tribute to my little sister. I don't know where to start. Then again, maybe, that's exactly where I start.

“My little sister” you always, in your mind, were my older sister. Simply because, you were taller than me. Even though, I always reminded you. Being taller than my 5ft nothing, was no great accomplishment....lol.

So many memories of you. All the way back to the night you were born. Even though it was April. Mom was wearing a night gown colored with the oranges and browns of fall. Leaning against dad's dresser bracing herself against the labor pains. Days later, when we all came to pick you and mom up at the hospital. They wheeled the two of you out. You, wrapped in a blanket tucked in mom's arms.

The first time I saw your sweet face it was all red and splotchy from all the crying you were doing. I wondered in my kid mind. Would you always be that noisy? You were.....lol always laughing or jabbering about something. You can't possibly remember, later that same summer. We were out on a lake, on a pontoon. Mom and dad filled an empty built in wooden box on that pontoon, with blankets and pillows and Tucked you in. You slept away as we went fishing. The following summer, okay, July 16, 1969 to be exact. Our brand new, hide-a-bed sofa was pulled out and you were propped up somewhere between me, Sue and Jim to watch the moon landing.

Once you started to talk. Our family never had “spaghetti” for dinner again. You re-named it “Gubghetti”lol You and I were out together one afternoon. I had to convince you, we could have lunch at TGI Fridays. Even though, they serve alcohol and, you weren't

21. That's my big little sister. Let's not forget a shared lifetime of rhyming names Mom and Dad calling out either “Karen” or “Sharon” and no matter which of us answered they responded “No, Not you, the other one” while cursing under their breath about rhyming names....lol

I love you Shar, I am sorry you had to endure such a long painful journey. I can only hope you are at peace and with Mom, Dad and maybe even Rosie... who can forget your love of animals.

Love,

Your little, big sister Kar
